RAPE CULTURE

It isn't a surprise that the two men accused of sexually assaulting a woman at the Hi-fi Music Hall were not prosecuted, as only 11 out of 1,000 perpetrators are brought to trial on those charges, according to RAINN.

Prosecutors commonly insist that they can't bring rape cases to trial because they can't prove "beyond a reasonable doubt." But, as Leigh Gilmore extensively documents in her book Tainted Witness: Why We Doubt What Women Say About Their Lives, women's testimony is doubted and disbelieved regardless of evidence.

To quote Gilmore: "The discourses about rape that circulate within rape culture undermine women's testimony. Rape discourse casts doubt on women as credible witnesses to their own harm, and on claims of rape in general. Through rape discourse, women who bring forward accounts of sexual violence are turned into tainted witnesses before the law and in courts of public opinion."

Gilmore explains how the pernicious influence of the "he said/she said" dynamic combines with the feeble excuse "no one knows what really happened" to immediately cast doubt on women and their testimony. These weak justifications for disbelieving women need be erased from the discussion if society is ever going to put an end to rape.

If prosecutors won't go after rapists as hard as they go after others, we will need to hold them — and the rapists they excuse — accountable.

LOVES THE COVENANT

Unlike the author of the previous review ("In Space, No One Can Hear You Yawn," EW, May 25), Alien: Covenant is my second-favorite Alien film. The title itself, reflecting on the agreement between God and Noah after the flood (the character David does deliver a torrent of sorts back to the Engineers).

I loved the recurring theme of the symphony, starting with the prologue after David gets a taste of sitting on the "throne," to where Walter mentions how one sour note can derail the entire symphony, and in the end when you hear the full composition of what David first played to bring it all full circle.

I also loved the inclusion of the religious captain that everyone brushed past, but towards the end the protagonist needs his faith if they are to survive the horror.

The Weekly reviewer chose to sit through an entire movie specifically looking for things to go against his liberal sensibilities to get triggered by. I wish people could just sit through a movie with an open mind and enjoy the ride. Especially a movie so rich in undertone and symbolism that's both well crafted and acted.

ARE THEY ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS?

The writer who wrote the Alien: Covenant review is an idiot with delusions that his opinions matter. I guess if a movie doesn't blatantly explain the plot and makes you think a little, it must be bad.

Perhaps author Rick Levin is in the wrong job because his reviews are not only inaccurate but borderline misogynistic; see line stating, "Katherine Waterson in the Butch Ripley role, right down to nipples poking through her tank top."

Perhaps he should apply at the local 7/11.

SAVE THE HULT CURTAIN

Another mistake, replacing the main curtain at the Hult Center.

This is not a curtain; this is a piece of art. It was selected in a national juried art competition and funded with one-percent for art funds.

This work, along with the other destroyed or misplaced forms of art, is a community resource. It is community property and must be maintained and cared for.

Art all over the world is restored, not destroyed.

Our current short list of not caring:

DEMOCRACY & EDUCATION

BY LARRY LEWIN, RACHEL RICH AND ROSCOE CARON

A Stick into the Spokes

OPTING OUT OF TESTING

Testing season is upon us — again. During April, May and June, students take weeks of Smarter Balanced Math and Language Arts tests. This is in addition to a year's worth of other tests such as OAKS Science, EasyCBM, DIBELS (Dynamic Indicators of Basic Early Literacy Skills), STAMP (STAndards-based Measurement of Proficiency), EDL2 (Evaluación del desarrollo de la lectura), etc.

Yet some choose not to. Their families sign the Oregon Department of Education's Opt Out form because House Bill 2655 allows every parent to make this choice for their kids for any reason. Forms are available online or in all school offices.

Two years ago, 10 percent of Eugene School District 4J students opted out; last year that number increased to 13 percent. (The numbers for this year are not yet tabulated.) Lake Oswego's opt-out rate was an astronomical 71 percent — with no repercussions!

The Springfield School Board last June unanimously passed a resolution urging parents to opt their kids out, calling the tests an "ineffective measure of student growth and accountability."

Then-Board Chairman Jonathan Light said the Smarter Balanced test was never created for students' benefit.

"It was designed to compare districts and teachers, not to help students learn," he said. "As a board member, I just don't feel like it's OK to encourage our students to participate in something that doesn't help them in any way. I really feel like school boards have to stand up for what's right for their students."

Amen to that.

WHAT OPTING OUT ACCOMPLISHES

When parents say no to these tests, they are jamming a stick into the spokes of a system that unfairly punishes many kids who don't test well for a variety of reasons, including various disabilities or English language learning.

Nationwide, teachers say the technology demands of tests, the wording of questions and even the tasks themselves are not age appropriate. Yet students who fail can be placed in remedial classes, too often at the expense of missing out on interesting and enriching electives.

HOW DID WE GET HERE?

Under No Child Left Behind, corporate reformers and their political allies believed they knew more about what's best for kids than teachers, administrators, local school district leaders and even parents. Under their corporate model, they determined that public schools (not the schools their own kids attend) should be run like businesses: data-driven, top-down and one-size-fits-all.

Corporate opportunists then turned classroom activities into profits. Work normally performed as part of a teacher's salary is gradually being replaced with computerized lessons and ever more standardized tests at enormous costs. This model has set the stage for U.S. Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos and her corporation-friendly devaluation of public education.

THE RESULT?

Before No Child Left Behind, kids normally took only three or four standardized tests from kindergarten through graduation. Now students in 4J and other districts take up to 120 standardized tests in addition to classroom tests and quizzes! And strangely, the Oregon Department of Education is considering adding even more standardized tests.

Since Oregon launched the state's Smarter Balanced tests three years ago, our overall standardized test spending has exploded to over $80 million annually. (Figure based on research through Oregon Rep. Susan McLain, a state contract and a grant application we'll post online.) Yet training to improve teaching dropped by millions! Electives like music, art, shop and PE all but disappeared. And key student services ranging from nurses to counselors rose a mere $125,000 annually — only 25 cents per student per year! We must restore a balance.

Schools are not factories. Kids are not products. Learning is not output production. Teachers are not input and output managers. Educational leaders should not be production supervisors and enforcers.

Make your voice heard and put a stick into the spokes. Contact your kids' teachers, their principal and your school board members to demand we rebalance our spending, reduce standardized testing and restore electives and student services. The timing is perfect; the state budget and test contracts are under negotiation.

Opt out now!

Larry Lewin, Rachel Rich and Roscoe Caron are former middle and high school teachers in Eugene and Springfield Districts. All are members of CAPE, the Community Alliance for Public Education, a coalition of parents, teachers, professors, students and community members who challenge the many assaults on public education and who believe that strong public education is the foundation for American democracy. We meet the 1st, 3rd, and 4th Mondays at 4:30 pm at Perugino in downtown Eugene. For more information, visit CAPE's website at oregoncape.org.

The Jacobs Gallery, the “flying people” at the airport; the abused Sandgren murals by the new glaring airport terminal lighting; the Hadzi sculpture from the County Public Services building; the destroyed art and murals from the past City Hall; soon, the opera; the reduced Bach Festival; the former national design awarded City Hall; soon, the Lane County Courthouse; the Federal Post Office; the pedestrian bridges abused by signs; and more to come.

Doesn't anyone care?

We have become “the just get by city,” not the city of the arts, imagination and culture. We apparently only embrace an “off-the-rack” mentality.

Eugene is famous within the valley as the city that destroys its history as documented by its art and architecture. Not surprisingly, we are still one of the largest cities in the U.S. without a public museum.

This piece of art, the curtain, represents what is the unique and special nature of this community and needs to be restored, preserved and maintained — not made into pillows or wall hangings.

City manager, stop this nonsense.

TOTEM CHAINSAW MASSACRE

Jim Linwood calls for “No More False Totems” in EW's letters section (May 25), referring to the Oregon Country Fair controversy over a commemorative pole that he claims would be part of having “acculturation and genocide constantly in our lives.”

I see that now that Amazon Pool has opened for the season, it has what appears to be a totem pole done in the familiar Pacific Northwest First Nation/Native American style. I don't know the history of this object. It seems to have been there for the past 30 years when I've been at the pool.

Does it too represent acculturation and genocide? Or does it have some kind of authenticity and resist genocide? Are there other suspect totems in Lane County? Should we get out our chainsaws?

And I don't quite follow Linwood's assertion that, “Too often we are in a position of naming Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard, and then killing him.” Wasn't the naming done in commemoration of the leader after he was assassinated? In fact, many years later, and after a rather protracted struggle to get the road renamed?

MAKE AMERICA, AMERICA

Because of the “genetic Republicans who could not conceive of not voting for a Republican” [“The Far Side,” EW 5/25] in Greg Walden's congressional district, any Democrat who runs against him will be at a disadvantage.

For this reason, it might be time for Bernie Sanders supporters who are disaffected with the Democratic Party to show their displeasure by registering as Republicans and mounting a primary election challenge to Walden. If they would do this, they could form a substantial voting bloc that could, at least, force Walden to use some of his million dollar campaign chest for the primary election.

Also, a progressive populist such as Sanders might be able to win the support of working class Republicans who are angry with the party for policies that are hurtful to them.

One of the reasons that the Republican Party has turned so far to the right lately is the fear moderate Republicans have of losing to Tea Party Republicans in the primary elections. This might change if there were substantial numbers of progressive Republican voters.

If someone does mount a campaign to attack Walden from the left, I can think of a good campaign slogan: “Make America America again.” This means putting the good of the American people above the good of any political party and going back to a time when the government was of, by, and for all the people, not just the privileged few.

TRUMP THE JOKER

After he (soon?) leaves office, the brand name of Trump will likely be so tarnished that he might need to find a new line of work beyond that of being a famous guy.

One possibility: Perhaps Donald Trump could find work as a comedy writer. He certainly seems to have a gift for irony. “I never mentioned the word or the name Israel,” he said, mentioning the word and name Israel, and thereby providing the first official confirmation that the agent whose intelligence he blabbed to the Russians in the oval office was indeed an Israeli asset.

HUMAN-POWERED TRANSPORTATION HAS AN IMPORTANT ROLE IN SUSTAINABLE LIVING

Many of us recognize the value of bicycling. It's fun (especially under the sun), it's good for the health of the cyclist and it's good for the health of the planet that we're all a part of.

We appreciate the organizations that promote cycling and all the awesome bike shops that sell and maintain the bikes we ride. Some of us are even aware of local businesses that design and build cycles, such as Co-Motion, Bike Friday and Human Powered Machines. But when thinking of cycling, how many of us think of it as something beyond a way to get from point A to point B?

Those of us who are concerned about the health of people and the planet need to start thinking outside of the box, and bikes play a key role. Focusing on other means of transportation is important, but our dependency on fossil-fuel-based transportation goes much deeper than that.

Almost every material product (as well as many living items such as plants) has reached you via the consumption of fossil fuels. For example, the average American meal travels 1,500 miles to go from farm to plate.

Traveling 1,500 miles by cycle to deliver food is not something being proposed here. Buying local is a first step. But part of buying local is thinking about how that local product was delivered to the store and to your door.

In the battle to fight climate change and all the other damages caused by our dependency on fossil fuels, bikes need to and can play a bigger role. This applies to the personal and business communities.

Much is happening right here and now in Eugene, and so much more could happen.

Just last year, one local business delivered more than 300,000 pounds of organic food products to local stores and restaurants via cycles. Another business likely delivered the very paper you're reading. Yes, Eugene Weekly has a good portion of its papers delivered by bike. And if you're living in Eugene, you can get food delivered to your door, by bike.

The honor of cycling 300,000 pounds in 2016 goes to Hummingbird Wholesale. That's 150 tons of organic food that most of us have eaten one way or another. They did it via two trikes (built locally by Human Powered Machines) and trailers.

Food to your door is a service provided by the Cascadian Courier Collective. They have been delivering for Eugene's best restaurants since 2013. Every delivery they do is by bike.

Pedalers Express (PedEx) — the business I work for — performs a lot of delivery services, including hopping on a bike at 6 o'clock every Thursday morning, rain or shine, to deliver EW.

Pedalers Express mostly delivers documents, but via our tri-hauler and trailer, we can deliver up to 1,200 pounds in one ride. In fact, on one fateful snowy day, we delivered 6,500 pounds of flour, honey and other GloryBee products. We average six tons a week of GloryBee deliveries to a variety of local businesses including The Kiva, Morning Glory and Marché Provisions.

Buying local is an added bonus to the bike delivery service. Most businesses that use it value purchasing their products locally. Every business listed here has a focus on local, organic products.

By the way, all the cycles used by PedEx were designed and built locally by Human Powered Machines.

Bikes are much better than automobiles for the health of our planet. There are many reasons for this, but an obvious one is air pollution — and, more specifically, climate change.

Based on PedEx miles and the EPA's average CO2 emissions per gallon of fuel, our services decreased CO2 emissions by six tons for the year 2016. That does not include the decrease of many other harmful pollutants emitted from fossil-fuel-dependent vehicles, such as methane, nitrous oxide and hydro-fluorocarbons.

It also does not include the amount of time, money and blood spent for oil.

If our society is going to take the steps to foster living on a healthy planet, cycles could and should play a bigger role. Not just for individuals, but for businesses, for communities and for the planet we live on.

John Herberg is general manager of Pedalers Express.

‘I’M AN ENEMY OF THE PEOPLE? OKAY, PROVE IT’

John Hockenberry, who started at KLCC, discusses his journalism career

In 2012, journalist John Hockenberry took the TED stage and talked about living life with intent. In his talk, “We Are All Designers,” he recalled his favorite design moment: While he was covering the collapse of Zaire, amid the failure of the banks, looting and bullets flying overhead, someone began shouting at Hockenberry. It was another man in a wheelchair, and he wanted to compare his wheels to Hockenberry’s.

Years later, Hockenberry installed flashy caster wheels to the front of his wheelchair, which he has used since a car accident when he was 19, and said he wished he could have shown them to the man in Zaire.

While he was a music major at the University of Oregon, he called KLCC to complain about the public radio station’s programming. Hockenberry tells Eugene Weekly that he didn’t intend on becoming a journalist, but KLCC invited him to become a news volunteer after receiving his critique.

“So I was just interested enough in trying something new,” Hockenberry says. “Eugene was this place to try something new.”

His KLCC volunteer gig landed him a job at NPR in Washington. Since then he has reported as a foreign correspondent from Zaire, Jerusalem, Iran, Iraq, Tunisia, Morocco, Turkey and Jordan and has worked for ABC and NBC.

For the past eight years he has hosted the Takeaway, a daily news show broadcast from WNYC in New York. Hockenberry was this year’s inaugural speaker at Lane Community College’s Presidential Lecture Series.

Eugene Weekly*: I read that you first called KLCC to complain about a story, and I was wondering what story did you call and complain about?

John Hockenberry: It’s a famous old story. I didn’t call in to complain about a particular story, I just complained that they were using too many repeats from the morning network shows and putting them on their local special. And I was at home practicing the piano because I was a music student at the UO, and I was just in a nasty kind of mood. I just picked up the phone and I said, “Why don’t you rename your Blue Plate Special noon show NPR Playback, how would that be? Because maybe that’s more correct?”

And I was prepared for any answer other than the one Don Hein, who was the news director back then, said. “Well, we’re a public station and we like to have everyone’s input, so why don’t you come down and be a part of the creation of the news. We’d love to have you come down and we’ll listen to your ideas.”

I mean this is like something out of some weird Bible story. I mean, it didn’t make any sense. I couldn’t say anything, so I just said, maybe I will. And then I did. And I went there and I loved it. I knew a lot about history. I knew a lot about science. My curiosity really drove my interest in news, and I was good with audio equipment because of my music background.

I kicked around as a volunteer for a while, and then Mount St. Helens erupted and all of a sudden the station was in the middle of this big story. In that first year it was still erupting and they needed people to do the little eruptions, and I did the little eruption stories. Gradually, I did bigger stories about the region and I remember I did the first story for NPR on Amazon. Amazon.com launched itself, and it got a center column piece in the Wall Street Journal, and I remember thinking that’s amazing — that’s going to be a big deal.

From that time, KLCC has been the birthplace of trying things that are a little scary.

So before you volunteered, it wasn’t your plan to become a journalist, it just happened?

No, I was studying French Baroque harpsichord with a teacher I loved at the University of Oregon. I loved the harpsichord. We had worked on the problems with me playing the piano because I couldn't do the pedals. I tried to invent a machine that would try and work it out. I came pretty close with this machine and that was my project as a junior. It went very well, but it taught me that I didn't want to be an inventor. But I got sidetracked, and journalism was it.

Where was your first assignment abroad?

Jerusalem in the middle of the first uprising called Intifada — young people throwing rocks at Israeli troops. It was deliberately designed to be asymmetrical so that the Israelis would have to use their heavy weapons against young kids who were just throwing rocks, so the pictures would sort of tell the tale of what the occupation was about.

I loved living in Jerusalem; I love the confusion and the contradictions of the place. You pick up the phone and there's no dial tone. You turn on the water; it doesn't work. There's no something that was so magical, and he was proud of what he'd done and he wanted to show me. And I couldn't speak a word of what he was speaking and he knew no English, but we had like a half hour conversation just looking at tires and spokes.

My producer said, "We have to get the fuck out of here now!" Just bullets flying and everything, and I said goodbye. He just said "Jambo," which is kind of see you later in another life. I still get all choked up just thinking about that.

What do you do when you interview difficult people? The one interview that comes to my mind was the day after the election when you talked to Paul Ramsey and he's just going on and on and said things like Hungary doesn't have the threat of Muslims, and women can walk around without worrying about being raped. And then he talked about getting back to being this 80 or 90 percent white Christian na-electricity for hours at a time.

If you're a disabled person, this is your orientation. You wake up in the morning and go, "Oh, what's going to screw up now?" I found that it was just so familiar being in a place like that just having this expectation that things weren't going to work and that people were around to help.

Jerusalem wasn't the only place that had that — Cairo was that way. Tehran was that way. In Africa, Somalia, the Congo, I mean in the midst of horrible conflict, terrible cruelty and death and pestilence and famine and things that just broke your heart, still there was just this sense that most of the world was having this experience that stuff just isn't going to go your way. I felt bonded to that.

During your TED Talk when you talked about being in Zaire, the DRC now, and you were talking about how this other person in a wheelchair came up to you, and then you guys were sort of invisible and you were just there. What was going on around you?

There were riots in the center of Kinshasa. People were pouring out of the banks. It was just falling apart and these poor people were just being told that their life savings were worth nothing.

And in the middle of this whole big crowd of chaos this guy rolls up selling newspapers, on his hand-cranked wheelchair, and he wants to compare. And everybody just stepped around us we were like in this world shielded, this brotherhood of tion. What do you do during those interviews?

The key in something like that is you don't want to debate him. You want him to say what is his gospel; you want to hear from his mouth what he believes. You want to put him in context that he believes he has influence and he does have influence and you get that out of him. He realized that he was going to have to take the position of deporting tens of millions of people.

It was just a way of letting him not hang himself, but reveal himself. I would rather have people understand their influence and then understand what it is they are trying to achieve, and they can make their own decision about whether this person is dangerous or not.

So as the U.S. continues to fall on the World Press Freedom index, it's 43 out of 181, what advice do you have for journalists who are living in a place where the president has called the press an enemy of the American people?

Wear it like a badge. Sure, that's my necktie. I'm an enemy of the people? Okay, prove it. I'll save more people than you save any day.

Trump and his tweets are his worst enemy. The enemy of the people is the deteriorating U.S. economy, the degraded educational system, the inability of the U.S. to match jobs with workers, the increasing divisions and inequalities in income. I'm afraid of them. I'm not afraid of my colleagues in journalism. ■

• Big changes are afoot at Saturday Market downtown Eugene with the coming departures of General Manager Kimberly Cullen and Manager of Promotions & Advertising Kim Still. "These are two high-profile, essentially Eugene jobs that require high levels of creativity and dedication to the cause of providing an accessible marketplace for local artisans and customers," Still says. Both are pursuing other work in the Eugene area, but Still did not elaborate by press time on why they are leaving or where they are going. A third position as market assistant is also open. Find job descriptions at eugen SaturdayMarket.org. Deadline to apply is June 9.

• Taylor's Bar & Grill just off the University of Oregon campus on 13th Avenue has a new owner, Ramzy Hatter, known in the Portland restaurant community as one of the founders and owners of the Lardo sandwich chain, a Russian restaurant Kachka, and a Pearl District bar, the River Pig Saloon. A May 17, 2016 Oregonian story reported on two lawsuits Hatter filed against his partners, one for $9 million and another for $1.6 million. Willamette Week has also tracked Hatter's legal battles. Taylor's has been a popular and storied UO watering hole since 1922. The previous owner is Chuck Hare of Hop Valley Brewing.

• Star Gate Awareness Resources, the metaphysical book, gift and music store at 1374 Willamette Street, is celebrating its 30th anniversary in June. "Staying in business can be difficult because you are always being tested for your accountability, integrity and staying true to your heart's vision," owner Alan Stein writes in a letter to the EW editor in 2007. A celebration is planned from noon to 3:30 pm Sunday, June 11, at Lamb Cottage community center in Skinner Butte Park, 130 Cheshire Avenue. The event includes live music by Chad Wilkins and Rob Tobias, dance, a vegan lunch and a "Gratitude for the Earth Ceremony."

• Marché Restaurant Group is welcoming back two noted former staffers, Rocky Maselli and Leah Pearl. The couple are returning to Eugene after five years working in San Francisco, says Marché founder and CEO Stephanie Pearl Kimmel. Rocky will be leading the Marché kitchen he helped design and build almost 20 years ago. Leah will return to her post as general manager of the newly expanded Provisions Market Hall.

Congratulations Art Johnson and all of our partners in Sustainability for developing a new 28 kW Solar power system with Advanced Energy Systems.

LOCAL GREEN ENERGY PROJECTS COMPETE

Solar or hydroelectric? Veneta or Cottage Grove? Seniors or youth? Either way, a massive grant for renewable energy is going to an organization with a worthy cause.

Two nonprofit organizations are competing for a grant of up to $40,000 from the Emerald People's Utility District (EPUD) to build renewable energy infrastructure. The Branch Road Farm School in Cottage Grove wants to establish a hydroelectric power system on its 73-acre property, and Mid-Lane Cares in Veneta wants to put solar panels on the roof of its Fern Ridge Service Center. Both projects passed a technical feasibility test from EPUD to ensure their viability.

The winner is decided by EPUD's customers who have signed up for their Green Program, where they pay $5 to $10 more on their utility bill to contribute to green energy projects in the Northwest. These customers get to vote on their preferred project on EPUD's website until June 12.

EPUD, a utility company servicing more than 20,000 customers in Eugene and surrounding areas, is going into its fourth year of awarding this grant. The past winners are the Creswell Food Bank, Pleasant Hill School District and the Lost Valley Education and Event Center.

"The costs of renewable infrastructure kept going down, but the prices for our customers stayed the same and we really wanted to support projects in our communities," says Rob Currier, energy services coordinator at EPUD. "If we can get more customers, maybe we can do two projects."

Ponds and Microturbines

The Branch Road Farm School's proposal is to build a water storage and hydroelectric power system that would generate 8,000 kilowatts of electricity per year.

"I believe that our project is worthy of voting for because we are a growing educational and resource center that can also serve to help with the very real needs to develop greater renewable energy resource understandings beyond solar," says Andhi Reyna, owner of Branch Road Farm.

The plan, if they succeed in getting the grant, is to build three large ponds on their property ranging from 150,000- to 200,000-gallon capacity. Water from the highest pond will travel down through a pipe that is rigged with a microturbine system to generate electricity. The water stored in the lower ponds will be used for gravity-fed irrigation.

During the summer, energy generated from solar panels will be used to pump water from the lower ponds back up to the higher pond to keep the hydroelectric system going. The farm school proposes that the electricity generated in this system will be enough meet their needs for machinery, refrigeration, lights and irrigation, thus eliminating a large cost for the nonprofit.

Branch Road works with the South Lane School District to provide field trips for most schools in the district as well as other regional school districts. They also participate in the Farm to School initiative to supply produce for school lunches.

They host teaching workshops, hands-on demonstrations, field trips, children and adult cooking classes, farm camps and after school programs. They also have a state licensed commercial kitchen for their own use and for use by the public for local food production and processing.

Solar Power in Veneta

Mid Lane Cares proposes to install forty 3-by-5-foot solar panels on the roof of the Fern Ridge Service Center for an annual production of 13,275 kilowatts of electricity.

The solar panels were a part of the initial design of the service center. Due to budget constraints, however, that idea had to be scrapped. Many energy saving design features remained, such as large windows to let in natural lighting, windows that can be opened to reduce the need for air conditioning and motion sensing light switches in all of the offices and meeting rooms. These features ensure that the energy created is reserved.

The Fern Ridge Service Center facilitates programs for vulnerable residents of Veneta. Mid Lane Cares operates the Love Project Food Pantry from the service center, which distributed 3,532 boxes of food in 2015. The center also houses Café 60, a place where seniors can get a free nutritionally balanced meal, as well as Meals on Wheels, which delivers meals to seniors and checks on their safety. Mid Lane Cares provides senior recreation, health and social activities at the center such as a memory loss group and tai chi. Emergency services and youth services, such as the SANTA program, which gave Christmas gifts to 602 children in 2014, also operate from the center. ■

IT'S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

RIVERBANK LUPINE
LUPINUS RIVULARIS

The frenetic flowering rush of spring is tapering off as nature settles into the languorous days surrounding the summer solstice. The sun rises early, before most people wake up, and sunset punctuates a late evening. For two months, the change in day length varies by barely an hour.

The meadow and woodland flowers will use the mix of long days and a reservoir of moisture in the soil to begin seed production and dispersal. Grassy hillsides transition from their brightest green to the beginning of brown over this stretch of time. Flower watchers will be setting their sights higher up the mountains in search of fresh bursts of color. Those gorgeous mountain ridges are dancing with butterflies seeking mates.

Nesting season is well underway, nowhere more obvious than on the ponds near the Willamette River.

Goslings and ducklings provide some of the most relaxing entertainment in town. Songbirds are active in the trees. Once the nestlings are fledged, young bird families will be seen in mixed foraging flocks again. Watch your home feeders and fill often.

Some city streets and sidewalks take on a black, varnished appearance after several sunny days in a row. This is a sticky coating of aphid droppings. We see it mostly under oak trees, favored by aphids. Aphids will be active throughout the summer, releasing their honeydew in highest amounts on sunny days. It is harmless but a nuisance to clean off when a car is left parked under an aphid tree on a hot day.

• The May 26 murder of two men and near-fatal stabbing of a third by a white supremacist on a Portland commuter train is a sickening punch to the gut. People lost their lives standing up to a man harassing a Muslim teenage girl and her friend. Meanwhile, a local racist hung a banner proclaiming “Jews did 9-11” off an I-5 bridge north of Eugene. Local activists raced to stop it but didn’t arrive in time. And yet, that is our answer: Keep trying to stop the hate. Intervene. Be the helpers.

• If you watched the CNN program on the early 1960s in America, you must have shared our wonder about where we are today. Can you imagine President Kennedy or President Johnson tweeting? Or falling into the orbit of Putin, as President Trump has done for a complex of personal reasons, probably mostly money? Or alienating Europe until Der Spiegel, the Time magazine of Germany says “A Danger to the World”? It’s time to get rid of Donald Trump.

• The results of the annual Point in Time Homeless Count are in. Lane County tells us that 1,529 people were counted, and “this number includes homeless community members who were counted in a myriad of locations including the streets, under bridges, in parks, at food pantries, day access centers, schools, churches, emergency shelters, and transitional housing programs for homeless persons on January 25, 2017.” One piece of good news is that on the night of the count, 741 previously homeless people were living in permanent housing designated for homeless people. We have yet to do enough to help the area’s unhoused — see our news story this week on the homeless and tickets from the police — but there are bright spots. Another possible ray of hope? The city of Eugene’s Budget Committee recently recommended $1 million of the Comcast settlement be used for housing for the homeless. Kudos, Eugene. Now the City Council just needs to pass it!

CRIMINALIZING HOMELESSNESS

Data show the unhoused are disproportionately ticketed in Eugene

More than one of every four people ticketed or arrested by Eugene police for minor crimes last year were homeless or lacked a permanent address, according to Eugene Weekly's analysis of city court records.

The court records also reveal that more than one-third of the minor cases involved people who lacked a permanent place to live at some time in the past three years.

Eugene officials have long struggled with the city's homeless population, public safety downtown and a shortage of social services. Police are often on the frontline of dealing with the homeless, many of whom face addiction and mental health issues. The city and police say they work to balance helping people while enforcing the law.

But social service advocates have also complained for years that Eugene police have "criminalized" homelessness.

The Human Services Commission in 2016 counted 1,451 homeless people in Lane County. The city of Eugene estimates the real number is higher — nearly 3,000 people in the community have no home to return to at night.

At most, the homeless in Eugene make up about 2 percent of the people living here, but they were defendants in more than 35 percent of the court cases in 2016, according to EW's analysis.

City officials and the Eugene Police Department acknowledge they have not studied how often the city's homeless face charges, court judgments and even jail time.

"What would be the purpose of that?" EPD Chief Pete Kerns says. "I don't need to know the numbers. We know that enforcement alone isn't going to improve safety because the conditions that lead to homelessness aren't going to be addressed through enforcement alone."

"I don't know the numbers," Vinis says. "I don't have any basis on which to judge it. I'm sorry; I don't know how many [tickets] they give. I haven't asked for it. I guess I could get it if I asked for it, but I just haven't. It hasn't come to me automatically."

"They don't ask the question because they don't want to know the answer," says Jennifer Frenzer, vice chair of the Eugene Human Right Commission, a longtime critic of police enforcement against the homeless. "If they had to look at the numbers they would see they would have to change their ways. And they do not want to change their ways."

City Councilor Emily Semple says she has heard of no overt policy from the police to target the homeless, but that heavy enforcement of policies like the camping ban disproportionately affects the homeless population.

"I think the hope is you can make people feel so uncomfortable that they'll go someplace else," Semple says. "The problem is that there's no place else to go."

Without a doubt, police face a difficult job in dealing with the homeless and other people who frequent downtown. Police and city officials say officers work with many people who lack housing to help them find shelter, medical attention or other needs. Officers say that citing or arresting people is often the last resort.

How often they do so is revealed in court records. Most citations and charges for misdemeanors brought by Eugene police go to the city's municipal court.

Our analysis looked at more than 1,800 people who were cited or charged by Eugene police for non-traffic violations in 2016, and the court records show that at least 25 percent lacked a permanent address at some point last year.

These records included those that list "general delivery" for the defendant's address. In those cases, court mailings go to the local post office.

In other cases, court records list "transient" or an address for a social services agency, such as White Bird Clinic, Catholic Community Services and St. Vincent De Paul Service Station. EW didn't count records as non-permanent addresses when the address line was blank, or where the defendant was listed as in jail or prison. (See sidebar for a detailed explanation of our analysis.)

The data show that 71 percent of the charges against the homeless or those without a permanent addresses come from a short list — criminal trespassing and drinking illegally in public lead the list, followed by violations of park rules, third-degree theft, prohibited camping and disorderly conduct.

The profile of charges looks different for people who aren't homeless: Those same charges make up only half the cases brought against people who have a permanent address on file.

Social service advocates say the homeless, by virtue of trying to stay alive, are most vulnerable to charges such as trespassing, violating park rules and camping.

"The cost of continually criminalizing surviving without shelter is just the wrong way to prioritize the use of city

BUT THEY WERE DEFENDANTS IN

MORE THAN 35 PERCENT OF THE COURT CASES IN 2016.

Yet police and city officials continue to make policy decisions about dealing with the homeless and safety issues downtown without knowing how often the police bring charges against people who lack a permanent address.

Mayor Lucy Vinis says she has asked for and received information from Kerns about the number of citations for illegal camping outside the parks, but did not have information for or ask about the ratio of citations issued to homeless people relative to all citations issued.

staff and resources," says Heather Sielicki, who serves on the city's Homelessness Work Group. "Using law enforcement to address a social problem is not the right idea, and it's not working."

"There's intent here, and it's ridiculous," says Kathy Walker, who is unaffiliated with the city but has dedicated her life to helping the homeless. "[The police] are trying to chase them out of town. I've been homeless before, but it wasn't a war like it is now."

CRIMINALIZED SLEEP

Economics and a failure of state and local safety nets have increased the number of unhoused people on Eugene streets and potential conflicts with police. The records don't indicate where the violations took place, but Eugene police's data suggest a lot of the citations and arrests occur in downtown.

It's here that Eugene police say they have increased their efforts to work with people in need rather than turn to their ticket books or handcuffs.

Officer Bo Rankin is assigned to the downtown team, where he patrols an area that includes the Eugene Library, the Eugene Station LTD bus stop and Kesey Square. In 2016, municipal court records show, Rankin had cited homeless people for violations and misdemeanors in at least 50 percent of his cases.

Rankin says that police officers stationed downtown get to know and care about the people who reside there, but they also have a duty to respond to complaints about trespassing or threats. He says often the only option police have is to issue citations or make arrests.

"Stacking 20 citations on a person may not correct their behavior," Rankin says. "But on the other hand, the 100th time you contact that person, they may decide to change their life."

"It's not necessarily that the police are bad guys, it's that the laws are bad," says Ken Neubeck, chair of Eugene's Human Rights Commission, who has been a frequent critic of the city's failure to do more to address homelessness in Eugene. "If you're going to penalize somebody with a citation or arrest for sleeping outside or in a doorway, but you're not going to provide them with an alternative place to go, this is called criminalization of homelessness."

Others have seen police actions that they find worrisome.

"Without a house, basically everything you do is illegal, like sleeping," said Sue Sierralupe of Occupy Medical, a free health care clinic frequented by homeless. "Jail is not the housing we are looking for [to help] the unhoused. It's fiscally irresponsible, inhumane and immoral."

Sierralupe says her staff has seen police write tickets to people sleeping on the sidewalk. When Occupy Medical was stationed in the Park Blocks, she says, it was a common practice for police to sweep the area to write tickets to homeless people.

Sierralupe says continually citing homeless people just forces them to move elsewhere and doesn't actually help fix the problem. She says it causes unhoused people not to report crimes because they've accumulated so many violations they haven't paid. She also says it makes it near impossible for homeless people to get jobs or pay rent, because their credit is so terrible. The effect, she says, is "crippling."

DECISIONS WITHOUT INFORMATION

"This is no surprise to us or to our downtown team," Eugene police spokeswoman Melinda McLaughlin wrote in an email to EW when apprised of the data. She added that downtown officers "are actively engaged in carrying out the Community Outreach Resource Team (CORT) program. Muni Court, social services, judges and Eugene police and others also are engaged with helping this population through Community Court."

Eugene police established the CORT program to identify the people who most frequently end up with citations or arrests and connect them with services that address their needs. Community Court allows an alternative to the typical justice system for dealing with low-level crimes by providing offenders access to social services and sentencing community service instead of jail time.

City Hall continues to make decisions — or delay decisions — about how to deal with the homeless in Eugene without any concrete numbers about how often police bring charges against people who lack a place to live.

For example, the Eugene City Council in March upped police enforcement downtown by banning dogs — a new ordinance that directly affects the homeless or other people who frequent areas around the library, Eugene Station, Kesey Square and other downtown gathering places. The city has more recently proposed banning alcohol in all city parks.

"The goal is not to impose penalties on people but to have a two-way conversation about what people need," Vinis says. "[The police] know the folks that are really living in our downtown and have that conversation about can they can help. The city is really working to help people instead of penalize people."

The city's refusal to provide data or offer any kind of public analysis of enforcement against people without permanent addresses, however, has generated criticism in the community. Walker believes police do track the data, and says they don't divulge it because it is "damning."

"There's no accountability whatsoever in EPD," Walker says, "They don't get down there and understand it; they just want to judge it from afar." Walker says the City Council is perpetuating the problem.

Sielicki called for Eugene police to "provide real analysis" on what it's costing citizens of Eugene to prioritize policing of the homeless population.

"If you're spending that much of your police force on how it is, and it's continuing not to work, you should weigh what it costs to provide actual services instead of just continued enforcement."

Councilor Semple was not surprised that people without housing are more likely to be issued tickets, and said the city should prioritize giving people housing choices before pushing enforcement.

Neubeck says it's "unfortunate" that neither the mayor, chief of police nor City Council knew the rate at which homeless people were being cited.

"This whole thing comes from the law enforcement approach to homelessness that's taken by the city of Eugene," Neubeck said. "You're constantly faced with people who are doing things out on the streets that are often against the law because they have no other place to do them, and that cycle of adding onto people's records is just going to continue so long as you don't take an alternative approach."

Kaylee Tornay, Francisca Benitez, Victoria Ganahl and Thomas Rivers contributed additional reporting. Data for this story were originally obtained with the help of the investigative reporting program at the University of Oregon School of Journalism and Communication.

GETTING THE NUMBERS

For our story on arrests and citations of homeless people for minor crimes, we used a database from the Eugene Municipal Court. The Municipal Court handles violations and misdemeanors within the city of Eugene. More serious charges are filed in Lane County Circuit Court.

The Municipal Court released data under the Oregon public records law. From it, we identified 1,834 individuals who were charged with committing non-driving violations or misdemeanors by Eugene police in 2016.

Court records list a mailing address for each defendant — the most current address known to court staff for the defendant. We focused on 2016 cases and the most recent charge against each defendant.

EW identified 170 people in the court database as homeless or lacking a permanent address. To reach this number, we counted people in the court database listed as transient; people whose mailing address was a motel or other temporary housing; and those whose mail went to social service agency or homeless shelter.

We identified another 346 people for whom the court listed "general delivery" as an address. With general delivery, any mailings from the courts would go to a post office, where the recipient can claim it. U.S. Postal Service regulations say general delivery is specifically "for transients and customers not permanently located."

Municipal Court staff objected to our automatically characterizing defendants listed under "general delivery" in the court database as transient or those lacking a permanent address.

The court staff said the "general delivery" designation did not necessarily reflect the information a defendant gave to police, and that the designation doesn't automatically mean the defendant is transient. Yet the court officials could not provide an estimate as to how often they used the "general delivery" designation when they knew the defendant was not a transient.

Therefore we were faced with determining how many people in the court database as "general delivery" were homeless or lacked a permanent address.

We chose at random 100 defendants who had been charged by the Eugene Police Department in 2016 and who had "general delivery" listed in the court database. We examined the file documents in the most recent case for each defendant. The court charged us $97.94 to let us look at the files.

Our sample found that, in 85 percent of the cases, the defendant fit our definition of transient. In these cases, legal documents or the police officer writing the ticket indicated that the defendant was transient, lacked an address, or listed a social service agency or homeless shelter in 2016.

In our sample, we didn't count cases in which the defendants, police or other court records provided no address information. In doing so, we are underestimating the actual rate. Nonetheless, we applied this conservative rate to calculate the number of defendants with a "general delivery" listing who are transient.

By our conservative estimate, at least 471 out of 1,834 people cited or arrested for minor crimes were homeless in 2016 — around 25.3 percent. The actual rate falls between 24.2 and 26.4 percent based on our sampling method and a 95 percent confidence level.

We wanted to also use information pulled directly from EPD reports and tickets. And we tried to do so.

In April, we filed a request under the Oregon public records law, asking the Eugene police for computer data collected from all tickets issued by their officers from 2014 through 2016.

In May, the Eugene police declined to provide the computer data as we had requested. Instead, the police told us we would need to examine the actual paper tickets and case files — more than 37,000 of them. We would be allowed to examine the files if the police pulled each file by hand, one by one, and only if we paid the police department's costs for providing the documents.

The bill for this service? $139,132.50.

And that's after the police gave us the 25 percent discount they routinely offer to all members of the news media.

We declined to pay, and we are working to have the Eugene police release data we originally sought in our public records request. — Kenny Jacoby

YOUNG THE GIANT

The Cuthbert Amphitheater, 2300 Leo Harris Parkway, provides a chance to enjoy the sunny weather and live music simultaneously this summer. Here are three shows to look forward to at the venue along the river later this summer:

YOUNG THE GIANT WITH COLD WAR KIDS AND JOYWAVE (AUG. 20)

California's indie pop outfit Young the Giant is touring after the release of its 2016 LP Home of the Strange. With soaring indie rock and sly vocals by Sameer Gadhia, the band's sound is sure to complement the mid-August heat. Fellow California band, Cold War Kids, brings a bluesier sound to the package with songs off its newest release, LA Divine. East Coast kids Joywave, best known for their spot on "Dangerous" by Big Data, will bring their infectious indie pop to round out the late summer show.

NATHANIEL RATELIFF AND THE NIGHT SWEATS WITH LAKE STREET DIVE (AUG. 25)

Nathaniel Rateliff and the Night Sweats capitalize on the nu-folk Americana revival in the best way possible. The band stomps and claps, but it never becomes too generic like The Lumineers or too hippie like Edward Sharpe and the Magnetic Zeroes. The Night Sweats find a happy medium, somewhere in-between accessible and unique. Rateliff's yelping in stomp-worthy songs like "S.O.B" is the perfect cathartic expression that, "damn, summer is almost done." Indie folk act Lake Street Dive opens.

MICHAEL FRANTI AND SPEARHEAD (SEPT. 7)

Michael Franti will bring the "Sound of Sunshine" and other songs to this frequently rainy state in September. Franti, a musician, humanitarian and spoken word artist among other titles, is known for his joyous folk inspired by world music styles. With his infectious joy and shoeless stage presence, Franti will be the perfect artist to wind the summer down and say goodbye to the sun for the next couple months. "That's the sound of sunshine," he sings as it goes away. — Sararosa Davies

A DAY WITH THE FISHES

Discover Willamette Hatchery
in Oakridge BY WILLIAM KENNEDY

You can almost listen to the entirety of Taylor Swift's album 1989 on the way to Oakridge. If you're the parent of a 7- or 8-year-old — and particularly a girl — you know what this means. For the rest of you, in case you weren't aware, Oakridge is about 45 minutes southeast of Eugene, past Pleasant Hill and Dexter Reservoir on the way to the mountains.

And located near Oakridge — a Lane County town with so much untapped tourist potential — is a little gem of a getaway spot for families called Willamette Hatchery. "Seen one fish hatchery, seen 'em all," you might say. But odds are you haven't been to a hatchery like this — called Oregon's best by roadtripsforfamilies.com, and for good reason.

So why is this such a great and easy way to pass a summer afternoon with the kids? First of all, Willamette Hatchery is a whole lot more than the fishes. Yes, you can toss food to writhing masses of beautiful Chinook salmon or steelhead as well as some whoppin' white sturgeon. You might even see a great blue heron swoop low over the water looking for a snack.

Next, check out the museum and interpretive center. See stuffed representations of animals native to Oregon: cougars, coyotes, foxes and wolverines. Use the guide to help identify species with your little one. Do you know what a ringed-tailed cat is? Neither did I before I went to Willamette Hatchery.

And bring a picnic because Willamette Hatchery has lots of great places to sit and eat; one picnic area is demarcated by a carved statue (one of many statues dotting the hatchery grounds) depicting a bear with a picnic basket. Get it? So classic. There's also an interpretive trail, easy for all ages, with signs identifying different native plant species along the way. And don't miss the viewing area full of beautiful upland game birds.

But the real crown jewel is the 9-hole mini golf course. Play golf while learning about the salmon lifecycle, complete with Oregon landmarks: Journey with the salmon downriver to the ocean, dodging predators and fisherman and then travel back upstream to spawn. I managed to get a hole-in-one.

Not that you should keep score, turning a nice family outing into a competition. I totally kept score and was robbed on several holes.

After your time at the hatchery, stop by Brewer's Union Local 180 on your way back through Oakridge for a refreshing adult beverage. Just one; you're driving. And minors are welcome. Think to yourself about all the fun you had at the hatchery and, other than the gas it took to get there, it was all totally free.

Willamette Fish Hatchery is open all year, but summer is the best time to visit. To get to the hatchery: From Oakridge Take Highway 58 to Salmon Creek Road. Travel one mile on Salmon Creek Road to the hatchery. Salmon Creek Road is 1.7 miles east of the stoplight in Oakridge.

Cold cheap beer and good live music — what more can one ask for during the Oregon summertime? Project Pabst is the one-stop shop for that and so much more. Although it transformed the beloved, multi-venue MusicFestNW into a more traditional, centralized festival in 2014, the more condensed style of Project Pabst is concentrated with huge name artists and of course, all the PBR anyone could ever want or need. The two-day, two-stage fest offers a lineup packed full of heavy-hitters like Iggy Pop, Beck, Die Antwoord and Nas. Located on the waterfront in Southwest Portland, Project Pabst is extremely accessible, near a ton of downtown bars and restaurants — although the festival offers “food and beer at reasonable ‘non-festival’ prices,” according to Pabst Blue Ribbon’s website. Along with catching all of your favorite bands, Project Pabst will feature booths from sponsors like Dr. Martens, Kettle Brand chips, Townshend’s Tea and Car2Go offering items for purchase and free swag. The festival is 21+, obviously, and takes place Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 26-27. For more info or to purchase tickets, visit portland.projectpabst.com. — Meerah Powell

Unlike the Oregon Country Fair, which has been around since the dawn of time, the Mohawk Valley Music Festival is a relative newcomer to the whole latter-day-hippie pastoral music scene thing. Started in 2014, Mohawk — with its beautiful setting 20 minutes outside Eugene at Bob’s Ranch in Marcola, the former site of the Northwest World Reggae Festival — is looking to take things to the next level this time around. “There’s just this vibe of real positivity about this event,” says general manager Tarra Jones, who says the woodsy setting by the river provides the perfect backdrop for a laid-back weekend of camping, community, music and arts. “Whether you’ve never been to a festival or whether you go to festivals all the time, you won’t find anything within a hundred miles of us that offers so much for so little. There is something for everyone here. There’s diverse music, and the site is intimate but big enough to have fun.” Along with local bands ranging from Sol Seed and Indubious to the Garcia Birthday Band, Jones scored a coup this year when she booked funky Minneapolis band Wookiefoot, a staple of the festival circuit. “They put on a hell of a show,” Jones says. “It’s like a circus, basically.” The Mohawk Valley Music Festival takes place Aug. 11-13 at Bob’s Ranch in Marcola. $90 for the weekend includes camping and access to fresh well water; info and tickets at mohawkvalleymusicfestival.com. — Rick Levin

There are many reasons that Oregon summers are great, but one of the biggest is that there are a ton of opportunities to fill up on great food. Here's a round-up of some food-centric events going on throughout the state this summer. Want a fruitful start to your summer? Check out the Lebanon Strawberry Festival, featuring the “World's Largest Strawberry Shortcake” and lots of other fun food options in the festival food court. It's going on from June 1-4 at Cheadle Lake Park (37919 Weirich Drive, Lebanon). To get a free slice of shortcake, check out the fest's Grand Parade, starting at 11 am Saturday, June 3 — cake will be served right after. The festival is free, but donations are accepted. If you're down to start the summer with the demise of your diet, check out the fourth-annual Beats, Brews and BBQ at Alton Baker Park on June 9-10 for some mouth-waterin' meat; it runs from 5 to 11 pm on Friday, June 9, and noon to 11 pm Saturday, June 10. Tickets range from $12-$25. On July 29, the 12th

Annual Northwest Paella Fest will take place on the outskirts of Eugene (86840 Dukhobar Road). The fest, celebrating the Spanish rice and seafood dish, is a benefit for Food for Lane County, and last year raised $17,000. Paellas will be made by teams and eaten by guests, and anyone can participate. Paella makers are expected to arrive around 2 pm and have their dishes ready to eat by 7 pm. There is a suggested donation of $30 per person for Food For Lane County. For more info, check out paellafest.blogspot.com. End the summer with some authentic Scandinavian food at the Scandinavian Festival (Sixth and Greenwood, downtown Junction City) from August 10-13. There will be Swedish meatballs, meatpies and æbleskivers, little “pancake puffs,” along with almost 40 other food cart options. The fest is going on from 10 am to 10 pm on Thursday, Aug. 10, through Saturday, Aug 12, and 10 am to 8 pm on Sunday, Aug. 13. Admission is FREE. — Meerah Powell

SUMMER GUIDE

The Whiteaker Block Party is back this year for the 11th time, and bigger than ever. With ten stages and four blocks of fun to be had, it's the can't-miss event in Eugene for the summer. Media liaison Girin Guha says the block party is all about local talent, accessibility and creativity. "It was always a sort of symbiosis with local business," he says, adding that in recent years they've partnered with LTD for free bus passes. Neighbors in the Whiteaker neighborhood have kept this tradition afloat through grit and willpower, a sort of DIY festival to promote local talent. "You'll see some street performers, and as you walk along the street you'll start having that sonic experience, like oh, there's someone's front yard with a stage and they're rocking out," Guha says. You're likely to see him on stage with his band, the Girin Guha Experience. "Some of the stages have genres, like ours is a metal stage," he adds. Past years have seen nearly 10,000 people attending the one-day event, with "a lot of costuming and some art installations." Food and craft vendors will be sprinkled among the various stages, and "the majority of the bands are Whiteaker bands or Eugene-based bands, so there's a real local-ness to it." This party is sure to be the quintessential Eugene experience. The Whiteaker Block Party takes place Aug. 5, along Third Avenue between Blair Boulevard and Jackson Street. FREE. — Kelly Kenoyer

SUMMER GUIDE

BRET MICHAELS

You can always count on the Lane County Fair to provide a few summer musts: people watching, ignoring that little safety-reasoning voice in your adult head and justifying a ride on a rickety mobile pirate ship, and shameless enjoyment of '80s/'90s bands. This summer the chart-topping female R&B group En Vogue will perform at the fair. Yes, the same '90s band that empowered us to call out our cheating exes whether we were working professionals or middle school students. LeAnn Rimes, Bret Michaels, Eli Young Band and Loverboy & Survivor will also hit the fair stage. Don't forget to pet the goats, bunnies and cows on display and for sale while you're at the fairgrounds, too. The fair also hosts Oregon authors, pig races and, most likely, clowns — though we prefer interacting with the less-scary reptile exhibits. Finally, the fair experience wouldn't be complete without consuming sugary fried dough, so bring a friend or enjoy an entire elephant ear all to yourself. The Lane County fair runs 11 am to 11 pm Wednesday, July 19, through Saturday, July 22, and 11 am to 8 pm Sunday, July 23, at the Lane County Fair Grounds, 796 W. 13th Avenue, atthefair.com. $6-$9. — Corinne Boyer

Whether you love it or hate it, marijuana is a huge part of Oregon culture. And yes, obviously Oregon has a summer festival about it. It's the third annual Oregon Hempfest, a three-day festival taking place Friday through Sunday, June 23 to 25, in Roseburg (383 Brumbach Rd). Though it might seem like it, Hempfest is not a weed-smoking free-for-all. According to the event's website, "The Oregon Hempfest will enforce and respect the guidelines in Measure 91, and we only support the LEGAL aspects of marijuana in the state of Oregon." This includes no recreational cannabis for sale at the festival. The fest offers more than 20 musical acts and more than 100 vendors, classes, guest speakers and camping. Hempfest opens at high noon (get it?) on Friday, June 23. The day-event hours go on until 8 pm, and camping hours start at 8 pm. Single day passes are $20 and night passes are also $20, but there is an early bird special for the whole weekend (both day events and night) for $60. It's a family friendly fest in the daytime, and children ages 9 and under are free. It's 21 and over for overnight camping. Visit umpquahempfest.com for more info and to purchase tickets.

Eugene is known for a lot of things — our general hippie-ness, Ken Kesey and his Merry Pranksters, Nike and Oregon football — but we’re not called “Tracktown, U.S.A.” for nothing. If you’re a runner yourself, take a break from the slew of 5ks, 10ks and marathons that are so prevalent in town, sit back and watch the feet of the nation’s best collegiate athletes hit the track. On June 7-10, the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships return to Hayward Field. This will be the 15th year that Hayward Field hosts the championships, “more than any other venue in the history of the meet,” according to GoTrackTownUSA’s website. Whether you’re an avid track and field fan, or you have never been to a meet before, the NCAA Championships has a diverse array of events throughout its four days — a little something for everyone. Both women and men will be competing in a wide range of events, from steeplechase, shot put and pole vault to the 100-meter dash and hurdles. The 2017 NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships is Wednesday, June 7, to Saturday, June 10. Tickets range from $11-$29 per day, and $22-$58 for the whole championship. For ticket info and a full schedule of events, check out GoTrackTownUSA.com. — Meerah Powell

When you think of an LGBTQ Pride festival, the first host city that probably comes to mind is San Francisco, or if we're talking more local — maybe Seattle or even Portland. But the Eugene-Springfield community also enthusiastically celebrates Pride, and is doing so on Saturday, Aug. 12, from noon to 7 pm in Alton Baker Park. The Eugene-Springfield Pride Festival is open to not only those in the LGBTQ community but to friends and allies as well. The all-day event is family friendly and kids are welcome. The fest offers food, drinks, vendors, a raffle and live entertainment; and there are still ways to get involved if you care about the cause. Check out eugene-pride.org for info on how to become a sponsor, volunteer, vendor or performer. $5 suggested donation. — Meerah Powell

If you’re trying to find a place to catch some great live music from big name bands this summer, the Oregon Zoo in Portland is probably the last venue to come to mind. But think again. The Oregon Zoo is boasting a diverse lineup of performers in its summer concert series, and instead of the typical burnt-out acts that usually play the state zoo-and-county-fair circuit — one-hit wonders from the early 2000s or ’80s hair metal bands on their almost-40th reunion tour — the Oregon Zoo’s lineup is filled with acts that could actually gain a good crowd from a normal music venue setting. The lineup offers popular older acts like ’80s rock star Pat Benatar, ’90s sensation Natalie Merchant and alt-rockers/folk-rockers, consecutively, Echo & The Bunnymen and Violent Femmes, as well as newer ones such as somber singer-songwriter Conor Oberst (of Bright Eyes) and slacker-rock rocker Mac DeMarco. There are also some off-the-beaten-path acts like Seu Jorge (the singing sailor in Wes Anderson’s A Life Aquatic) covering David Bowie songs and Garrison Keillor doing comedy and storytelling. Ticket prices vary for each performance, but most start at $30. So, after you’re done checking out the lions and the penguins for the day, grab a soft pretzel and a soda, sit down and enjoy a show. — Meerah Powell

It’s the middle of the day, but the birds are roosting in the trees. Everything gets colder and darker, as if night has come early. Strangely shaped shadows and lights are cast across the earth. But it’s not the Apocalypse — it’s just the effects of the unearthly solar eclipse.

Scott Fisher, a professor of astronomy at University of Oregon, says the eclipse we’ll see in Oregon is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to see a fascinating phenomenon.

“It turns out we have solar eclipses about once a year somewhere on Earth, but it’s really rare to happen where you are,” he says, adding that the last eclipse to occur in Oregon happened in 1979. “It literally is a little 3-minute night.”

Fisher says the eclipse is “this rare alignment where the moon comes directly between the sun and the Earth,” casting a shadow 70 miles wide. “The shadow is going to go completely across the United States.”

The eclipse will be visible to some degree across the entire U.S., but the path of totality — the 70-mile wide band in which the entire sun will be obscured by the moon — passes through 14 states, according to NASA.

Eugene barely misses the band of totality. “Here in Eugene 99.1 percent of the sun will be covered,” Fisher says. The special effects of an eclipse, like confused birds, dropped temperature, the beautiful and rarely visible corona of the sun only occur in the band of totality, which lands north of Eugene. Corvallis, Albany and Salem are within the path here in the valley, while Redmond, Madras and Mitchell will catch totality east of the cascades.

Many towns in the path are already reporting fully booked hotels and campsites.

Astronomers and space geeks are already planning where they’ll be. Fisher says he’ll be in Madras on Aug. 21, the day of the eclipse, to seek out guaranteed clear skies. “Here in the valley the estimates are 75 or 80 percent chance [of clear skies], and over the mountains it’s more like 90 percent. So all the astronomy nuts I know are going across the mountains.”

He’s also planning on arriving two days early to avoid traffic. Fisher expects that I-5 will be a parking lot, and that “people will just pull off on the side of the road and look up.” It’s important to plan ahead for traffic and lodging, he warns.

“The current estimate is that we will have between 800,000 and a million visitors that weekend in Oregon.”

Perhaps the most important detail of all is safety. Staring directly into the sun can cause blindness in the blink of an eye. “The sun is really bright. Brightest thing in the sky by a factor of a million or more,” Fisher says.

In our eyes, he adds, “the retina are the cells that actually react to light. And much like if you took an air horn and blew it in your ear, the sunlight is so bright it basically burns your retina up. That’s irreversible.”

No fear, however. There are excellent options to safely view the eclipse. The UO physics department is already handing out small cardboard eclipse viewers, which diminish light by 99 percent.

Fisher says many stores around town are likely to stock them shortly before Aug. 21, but if you’re not one to take chances you can order them yourself from websites like rainbowsymphonystore.com.

You can also look at an image of the eclipse using a pinhole camera made out of a shoebox. Once the sun is totally obscured, Fisher says, it’s safe to observe it without protection.

If you’re planning on photographing the eclipse, Fisher says “never ever look through a telescope at the sun, don’t use a camera lens to look at the sun. Anything that magnifies is bad.”

It’s possible to buy a certified solar filter for your camera, but keep in mind that products made for the naked eye may not fully protect the retina if the sun is being magnified.

Those here in Eugene should try to get up to the path of totality, Fisher says. “It’s an emotional, powerful thing to see and I urge everyone to try to see it.”

“Astronomy is deeply embedded in our lives, but we don’t think about it anymore. We get up and go to bed because the sun rises and sets, we measure our age by how many times we’ve gone around the sun.”

The solar eclipse in Oregon takes place on Aug. 21, and will begin its partial phase at 9:04 am. The phase of totality will begin at 10:16 am on the coast, and will last around two minutes.

It's controversial, risqué, but also obviously a whole lot of fun. Portland's version of the annual World Naked Bike Ride is coming up again on June 24, so either avoid it and shield your eyes or strip down and saddle-up. It should be mentioned, though, that the event isn't just a naked bike ride for the sake of a naked bike ride. The ride brings thousands of people together every year in support of body-positivity, bike safety and human-powered transportation as an ecological alternative, and since it's technically a protest, according to Portland World Naked Bike Ride's website, it's perfectly legal. Also, there is no requirement to get completely naked. The dress code is "as bare as you dare," according to the website. Although the starting location has not yet been announced yet, the ride itself is approximately 7 miles long. It meets at 8 pm and leaves at 9. Check out pdxwnbr.org for more info. The event is free, but donations are accepted. Eugene has its own World Naked Bike Ride this year, and it's on June 10. — Meerah Powell

SUMMER GUIDE

For some people, summer can get downright trashy — groggy day-drinking extravaganzas and playing beer pong for hours in the hot sun — but it doesn't have to be that way. Maude Kerns Art Center's 34th annual Art and the Vineyard Festival is a chance to take in some culture July 2 through 4. The festival, which started as a small art auction and wine-tasting event, has now become the premier art and wine festival in the southern Willamette Valley, according to its website. The festival is all-ages and includes a "Youth Art Arena" for younger children to do arts and crafts. For adults, there will be wine tasting from various wineries in the region and a beer garden sponsored by Hop Valley. There will also be an international food court with a little something for everyone. As for art, the Artists' Marketplace will be filled with artists from Oregon and beyond selling paintings, photographs, sculpture, jewelry and more. There will also be live music throughout on all three festival days, and the last day, July 4, will have a fireworks show. The festival is open from 10 am to 7:30 pm Sunday, July 2, and Monday, July 3, and 10 am to 8:30 pm Tuesday, July 4. Tickets are $10 a day or $25 for a three-day pass. Youth ages 6 to 14 get in for $5 a day and children under 5 are FREE. For more info, visit artandthevineyard.org or contactstaff@mkartcenter.org. — Meerah Powell

SUMMER GUIDE

For a lot of people, music festivals can be too overwhelming. Hordes of people rushing from stage to stage to see their favorite artists, cramped camping areas and trash everywhere can be a recipe for anxiety. Luckily, Pickathon exists. The annual music festival — which takes place in Happy Valley, and caps ticket sales at 3,500 people, according to its Facebook — is a dream come true for people who love music but hate the usual festival culture that comes with it. Camping is first-come, first-serve in the woods of the 80-acre Pendarvis Farm, giving patrons the option to set up camp with a group of friends near the heart of the festival, or get some solitary time on the outskirts. Unlike other music festivals, Pickathon also makes a conscious effort to eliminate waste by using reusable plates, cups and utensils, taking advantage of solar power and, of course, strongly pushing recycling and composting. Over the four-day fest, artists will play at least two sets, giving fans the chance to choose their own adventure and curate the perfectly diversified schedule, or see their favorite artists more than once. This year, the lineup includes the always wonderful and always soulful Charles Bradley & His Extraordinaires and noisy and lovable alt-rock Gods Dinosaur Jr. among many, many other acts. Pickathon takes place from Aug. 3 to 6. For more info or to purchase tickets, visit pickathon.com. — Meerah Powell

BEACHES FOREVER!

Why are Oregon Beaches Public, and Where Can You Enjoy One?

BY RACHAEL CARNES

Legislature to declare all the state's tidelands to be a state highway. Wait, what?

If you could teleport yourself to the local beach in 1899, you'd find wagons using the wide expanses of packed sand as the only public roads north and south.

West's workaround held for more than 50 years.

But in 1966, a local hotel owner challenged the public easement, instructing his resort's "cabana boys" to tell beachgoers who were not staying at the motel to leave the dry sand "private beach" in front of the motel.

The effort drew public complaint and exposed a flaw ne of the things that makes Oregon so livable is our miles of unspoiled public beaches. More than a century ago, Oregon Gov. Oswald West engineered the first major protection of public access to the state's beaches by convincing the 1913 Oregon in the 1913 bill, which technically protected only the wet sands.

The 1967 Legislature attempted to fix the loophole with House Bill 1601. Dubbed the "Beach Bill," it declared all wet sand lying within 16 vertical feet of the low-tide line to be the property of the state. The law also required that property owners seek state permits for building and other uses of the ocean shore and declared that the public would have free and uninterrupted use of the beaches.

Fifty years later, we enjoy the Beach Bill's success.

Here are just a few local beaches on and off the beaten path worth celebrating:

HECETA HEAD LIGHTHOUSE STATE SCENIC VIEWPOINT

Located 13 miles north of Florence. At low tide, tide pools to the north reveal themselves, and a pleasant 10-minute walk leads to a fully restored lighthouse. Built in 1894, the 56-foot lighthouse shines a beam visible for 21 nautical miles, making it the strongest light on the Oregon Coast.

HOBBIT TRAIL

The parking pullout for Hobbit Trail is easy to miss, just a mile north of Heceta Head, on the east side of Highway 101. Be careful as you cross the road — then plunge into the deep cool of Sitka spruce and rhodies. Follow the Hobbit Trail as it winds down towards the ocean. Get your Bilbo Baggins on as the soft sandstone beneath you squishes under your feet. Go barefoot. Seriously, this is the best part. The trail getting down to the beach is magical.

SEAL ROCK STATE PARK

Seal Rock State Wayside, a few miles north of Waldport, has large off-shore rock formations which provide year-round habitats for seals, sea lions, sea birds and other marine life. Terrific tide pooling can be found here.

BRIAN BOOTH STATE PARK

Brian Booth State Park is a coastal recreational area just north of Seal Rock, consisting of two major portions: Ona Beach State Park and Beaver Creek Natural Area. The park has beach access, kayaking and hiking trails — and fewer people.

NAMELESS SPOT SOUTH OF NEWPORT

About eight miles south of Newport, look for milepost 145, and about three quarters of a mile north of that, you'll see an unmarked beach access with a gravel patch by the side of the road. Once on this unnamed beach, you'll find a pleasant stream and a lot of striking sandstone cliffs. But head maybe a quarter of a mile to the south and there's a couple of enchanting rounded-out areas in the cliffs, one of which has a tiny waterfall.

Whose beaches? Our beaches!

Anthony Lakes Mountain Bike Festival, guided

How better to kick off the summer than with BBQ in the park? The fourth annual Beats, Brews and BBQ will feature headliners Revelators on Friday, June 9, and Marv Ellis & We Tribe on Saturday, June 10. Northwest bands like Cherry Poppin’ Daddies, Hank Shreve Band, Sol Seed, Goldfoot, Eleven Eyes and Inner Limits will grace the stage as well. Justin Sheppard, owner of Cornerstone Tailgates and Events, is putting on the event. He says, “If people are really into craft beer, we’ll have a great selection of craft beer from all over Oregon.” Your ticket buys you a commemorative event mug and three taster tickets. Barbeque aficionados can expect all their favorite restaurants to be represented, as well as a few non-barbeque alternatives for vegetarian attendees. “People can come with their blankets and lawn chairs and kick it in the grass,” Sheppard says. Alton Baker Park is a great venue, he says, because of the ample shade, space and parking. “We expect a good 1,500 people throughout the weekend,” he adds. The event is family-friendly till dusk, with face painting tents available to keep your kids adorably occupied. Beats, Brews and BBQ is Friday, June 9, from 5-11 pm and Saturday, June 10, from noon-11 pm at Alton Baker Park. Tickets are $15 for Friday, $17 for Saturday, or $25 for both. Kids under 15 get in FREE. — Kelly Kenoyer

When most people think of magic shows they probably think of goofy a looking birthday party magician dressed in a cheap suit doing card tricks, waving around a plastic black and white wand and pulling rabbits out of hats. But not all magicians are cheesy, and not all magic shows are just for kids. Brooklyn-born magician and illusionist David Blaine has been taking magic to the next level for about 20 years through television specials and public spectacles. Known mostly for his extreme endurance stunts, Blaine has held his breath under water for almost nine minutes, been buried alive and caught a .22 caliber bullet in a small metal cup in his mouth (check all of those out on his website, davidblaine.com). Blaine is going on his first-ever national tour, making a stop in Eugene on Tuesday, June 6. According to his website, the tour itself is an experiment and “will evolve as it moves across the country as Blaine continues to push the limits and attempt new feats for the first time live in front of his audiences. No two shows will be exactly the same.”

Blaine will be bringing his one-man show to Eugene 8 pm on Tuesday, June 6, at the Hult Center. Tickets range from $33.95-$90.70. — Meerah Powell

Is your pooch sad after being banned from downtown? Do you miss getting tea and sitting in Kesey Square with your furry best friend? You can finally protest the dog ban with Don't Ban Me: A Pet Parade! Well-behaved and leashed pets of all shapes and sizes are welcome at this parade, which will start at the FOOD for Lane County Dining Room. Participants will march around the perimeter of the dog exclusion area in costumes and on leashes to protest the unjust banishment. The event isn't just in favor of pups with roofs over their heads either. The event description says, "Dogs are not just a luxury for those of us in the worst poverty. Dogs are a means of survival for many, especially those living unhoused. Having dogs provides security for many, especially women, trans and gender non-conforming folks, and people of color living on the streets who are more likely to be targeted for violence." Get out there and raise your howls in protest! For more info check out the Facebook event page.

Don't Ban Me: A Pet Parade is 5-7 pm Friday, June 2. The march begins at the parking lot of the FOOD for Lane County Dining Room, 270 W. 8th Avenue. FREE. — Kelly Kenoyer

LIEV SCHREIBER
IN CHUCK

REQUIEM FOR A HEAVYWEIGHT

Liev Schreiber shines as the real-life fighter who inspired Rocky in the quiet, moving Chuck

Alongside baseball, the sport of boxing has provided a seemingly inexhaustible supply of stories for movies to tell. Brutal, lonely and intimately attuned to the American experience of aggressive individualism, boxing exposes the loutish violence that is the secret endgame of all conflict. It just reverses the order.

Crudely put, boxing movies typically break into two distinct categories: the underdog who triumphs (Rocky) and the champion who unravels (Raging Bull). There are variations on the two themes but, in general, these tragic-heroic categories have offered more than enough mythological fuel to keep boxing movies on the screen long after the sport itself has fallen into general disregard.

Working with a script co-written by Jerry Stahl (Permanent Midnight), Canadian-born director Philippe Falardeau complicates the Rocky-Raging Bull paradigm with Chuck, a boxing movie that touchingly overflows its own limited pretensions. The film is warm, funny and surprisingly moving. It dances like a butterfly and stings like a bee.

Based on a true story, Chuck centers on the moderate rise and unspectacular fall of Chuck Wepner, the New Jersey fighter who challenged Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title in 1975. Nicknamed the “Bayonne Bleeder,” Wepner — famous for his ability to take a punch — was the real-life inspiration for Sylvester Stallone’s Rocky Balboa.

As Wepner, Liev Schreiber is pitch-perfect; he brings an irresistible charm to the role of an immature, star-struck goon of a man who is less concerned with winning than with the adulation he receives as a punch-drunk folk hero. The film is by turns wince-worthy and heartbreaking, as Schreiber bumbles and flails through life, the bemused fuck-up you want to forgive just one more time.

And Schreiber is surrounded by a dream cast: Elisabeth Moss as his distressed, impossibly dignified wife; Ron Perlman as his gruff manager; Jim Gaffigan as the toadying friend, always hovering by his side; Pooch Hall, who excels in the difficult role of Ali; and Michael Rapaport as Chuck’s estranged brother.

One of the film’s greatest pleasures is watching the embattled chemistry that develops slowly between Chuck and the wise, wizened bartender he romances, played by Schreiber’s real-life wife, Naomi Watts. It’s a treat to watch two such accomplished actors bounce off each other with such poise — think of the wry, sexy heat that sparked between Bogart and Bacall.

Chuck adds absolutely nothing to the outward architecture of the standard biopic; it hits all the familiar points of interest, and it does so on a reduced scale that is completely in keeping with its subject. The film is so formalized that, at times, it plays like an expert homage to Martin Scorsese by way of Paul Thomas Anderson, complete with coked-up boogie nights, slapstick masculinity and a marble-mouthed voice-over by Schreiber.

And yet, because it never swings wildly for the knockout punch, Chuck achieves a level of authenticity that is rather remarkable, thanks in large part to the vulnerability of Schreiber’s performance. This is a quietly explosive film that moves with uncommon grace within its own squared parameters, like Ali dancing around the ring. And it pulls a kind of rope-a-dope on your emotions, wearing you down with beautiful, excruciating scenes of humanity. Unlike most movies of its kind, its posture is defensive, forever throwing up the gloves against the next haymaker.

In a season of endlessly recycled aliens and superheroes, Chuck is one of the sleeper hits of the year — a bittersweet boxing film whose toughest jabs come from the hard knocks of everyday life: marriage, family, parenting and surviving our own stupidity before, on quaking knees, we stand up to take another swipe. BREWS MEET MUSE

Party with Siri Vik, Eugene Symphony and plenty of food and drink at SymFest

Beer and classical music enjoy a long and storied relationship, stretching back to those monks who chanted holy praise by night and brewed ales by day, through all those Austrian and German composers who quaffed their way through compositions, performances and post-concert revelry — practices that I understand continue today.

On June 3 at the Hult Center, the Eugene Symphony nurtures that happy relationship with its second-annual SymFest. Starting 5:30 pm, the fest features traditional bluegrass (Corwin Bolt and the Wingnuts), Her Royal Slugness Eugenia Slimesworth, Mariachi del Sol, Danceability International, food carts, locally made kombucha, cider and, of course, malty, hoppy, bubbly beverages brewed right here in River City.

At 7:30 pm the orchestra joins Eugene chanteuse Siri Vik singing some of her specialties, the music of Edith Piaf and Kurt Weill, and the energetic trio Time for Three. Young Philadelphia Orchestra fiddlers Zachary De Pue and Nicolas Kendall and bassist Ranaan Meyer met in college at the celebrated Curtis Institute.

I've personally witnessed rock-concert rhythmic clapping and cheering by teens and 20-somethings at Time for Three shows. This time, they'll play music from Stravinsky's gorgeous ballet score The Firebird, mix Mahler's mighty Symphony No. 1 with their arrangements of The Verve's "Bittersweet Symphony" and Guns N' Roses' explosive "Sweet Child O' Mine," then sprinkle a bit of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with tunes from Hamilton, Bernard Herrmann's haunting score from Hitchcock's Vertigo and Britney Spears' "Toxic." The festival closes with a post-concert dance party in the Hult lobby by DJ Foodstamp and a jazz lounge in Soreng Theater.

There's more partying going on around the University of Oregon, where school's almost done. The Oregon Percussion Ensemble gives its end-of-year concert June 1 at Aasen-Hull Hall. For choral music fans, the Chamber Choir and University Singers give their closing concert at Beall Hall June 2, which hosts the Women's Choir and Repertory Singers June 10 and the ever-popular Gospel Choirs June 11.

Beall hosts the big free Chamber Music on Campus concert June 6. Band music fans have the annual Green Garter band show to look forward to June 3 at WOW Hall, and Oregon Symphonic Band at Beall June 8, including music by contemporary American composers David Maslanka and Frani Ticheli. And then the mother of all Eugene jazz parties: all UO jazz combos and Big Band, plus LCC's jazz groups, blowing from 5-11 pm Sunday, June 11, at the Jazz Station, which on June 3 also hosts Tom Bergeron's Brasil Band, featuring its original pianist, the Brazilian composer Cassio Vianna.

Speaking of jazz fusion, on June 1 The Shedd brings back French violinist Jean-Luc Ponty, who took over the jazz violin legacy established by earlier greats like Stephane Grappelli and Joe Venuti in the 1970s, when his jazz-rock fusion of that era was all over jazz radio.

Since then, he's continued to merge jazz with other music, including Indian, African, orchestral and even joined that paragon of fusion, Return to Forever. At The Shedd he'll have a quartet featuring guitar, keyboards and rhythm section.

The next night, Friday, June 2, The Shedd features another virtuoso who earned a reputation in the 1970s, guitarist David Lindley, who along with gracing pop albums by Jackson Browne and others led his own bands that melded various world music traditions.

Playing various stringed instruments, he'll take you on a musical journey — make that party — that stops in African, Asian, Arabian, Celtic, Turkish and other musical territories. ■

DUST TO DIGITAL

“It sounds like aiming when you’re shooting a basketball. It’s not gonna work,” Zach Lupetin of L.A. roots, soul and Americana act Dustbowl Revival tells me over the phone. I’m talking to him about fighting perfectionism while in the studio. And Lupetin says working with producer Ted Hutt, known for working with Old Crow Medicine Show and Lucero, added a punk-rock mentality to his band’s latest self-titled effort. “He wanted us to just go in there and kick the shit out of a song. He was able to harness that from us.”

A large band, Dustbowl plays everything from R&B, string music, dirty jazz and pre-war blues to funk — crowned by fiery soul-sister vocals provided by Liz Beebe. “If you could see me now!” she hollers defiantly off an album-track of the same name, standing tall on a pedestal of New Orleans-style horns and a badass groove. But Lupetin says while Dustbowl once paid homage to these styles, with their latest release they’ve developed their own sound.

“Putting our stamp on our version of bluegrass, our version of brass band music and soul,” Lupetin says. “An Americana, soul, roots thing.” But when it comes to describing his band, Lupetin challenges people to simply come to a show and find out. “It’s about the community supporting live music,” he says.

Dustbowl Revival returns to Eugene alongside Eugene’s Betty and The Boy 10 pm Saturday, June 3, at Hi Fi Music Hall Lounge; $10 advance, $12 door, 21-plus. — Will Kennedy

CHEFFIN' UP INSTRUMENTALS

Heavily auto-tuned, Houston's Travis Scott may seem just another robot-voiced rapper stretching his limited vocal range into a kind of soul music for the singularity: a casualty of modern pop existing in a focused grouped box that's within a box and produced in a factory.

Yet there's an earthy charisma beneath the synthetic veneer of Scott's wildly popular 2016 release, Birds in the Trap Sing McKnight. First, there's the loping, whooping chain-gang backbone of "Way Back," Scott testifying to the awesome spectacle of Houston Rockets star James Harden when he finds the range.

And then there's something of the old-time bluesman on McKnight album-track "The Ends," a strongly narrative tale about a predator conning kids to their demise with promises of fame and fortune in the music biz. Scott growls: "I gave up on the Bible long time ago ... I came up in the town, they were murderin' kids/ And dumped them in the creek up from where I live," and you can feel it's true.

Scott's a natural storyteller. And throughout McKnight, the conceptual brio, future-leaning production and sweaty veracity put Scott in line, in the eyes of many, to be heir apparent to one-time collaborator and reigning hip-hop king of self-promotion, Kanye West.

In fact, Scott recently broke his own world record performing his own song "Goosebumps" 15 times in a row, the kind of absurdist concept rap stunt that surely leaves West slapping his forehead like, "I'm losing my edge."

But for Scott's fans, the rapper's frenetic stage show and electric mic presence are what it's all about. Scott was recently arrested in Arkansas for inciting a riot at his performance. He pleaded not guilty and was released without bail, proving one person's riot is another person's show business.

Travis Scott brings his Bird's Eye View Tour to Eugene alongside Khalid 8 pm Friday, June 2, at Cuthbert Amphitheater; the show is all ages and SOLD OUT, but in 2017 there may still be ways to score tickets to the areas most hotly anticipated show of the summer. — Will Kennedy

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S
WHAT IN DANCE THIS MONTH

BY RACHAEL CARNES

Across the country, and right here in Eugene, summer is a great time for performing artists to get out of the theater — away from the driving push of ticket sales — and into a space where making art invites a wider community conversation.

Dance should stand up to getting stripped down. (If movement isn't utterly compelling under bare work lights and in sweatpants, it probably needs more rehearsal.) Looking at dance can be a critical act, but as audience members, we're not given many opportunities to engage on a participatory level. Dance in Dialogue is trying to change that.

Tonight, June 1, Dance in Dialogue (DiD) presents new work by Rachel Carrico, Abbey McBride and Shannon Mockli in an accessible venue for sharing thoughts, questions, and ideas about making dances.

It's been a delight to watch DiD take root.

Through a constructive (and mercifully brief) group chat following each piece, DiD offers feedback to its artists, giving them a path to follow toward a fully realized final new work.

DiD's model takes the cornerstone of the creative process — critique — and bestows the audience itself with the means to articulate what they see. In a warm and inviting way, DiD quietly nurtures a future for contemporary dance in Eugene.

Catch DiD 6 pm tonight, June 1, at the Friend's Meeting House.

And tomorrow night's a party with dance freebies happening all over downtown.

#instaballet kicks off their performance-making season by creating a new ballet with audience input from 5:30 to 8 pm June 2 at Capitello Wines, 540 Charnelton Street. Catch African Dance and Drumming with the West African Cultural Arts Institute 6 pm at the Downtown Eugene Public Library. Or check out a history of dance presented by Arts Alive, 5 to 8 pm in Kesey Square, followed by a free community dance with Gerry Rempel.

Eugene has a growing Flamenco scene, welcoming Sentido Flamenco, featuring Antonio Rosario, 6 pm June 14 at the Oregon Wine LAB, 488 Lincoln Street.

Out of town, Seattle's Whim W'Him presents Olivier Wever's Approaching Ecstasy at the Cornish Playhouse 8 pm June 2, 3, 9 and 10. Incorporating 40 singers, 5 instrumentalists and 7 dancers, the production is inspired by the poems of Constantine Cavafy, who lived as a closeted gay man in Egypt at the end of the 19th century.

Portland's NW Dance Project closes its 2016-17 season with a world premiere from Sarah Slipper and with the return of Chopin Project, featuring four choreographers interpreting Chopin's complete 24 preludes played live by Portland concert pianist Hunter Noack.

Locally, Xcape Dance Company presents The Takeover 8 pm June 3 at Hi-Fi Music Hall. Reign Dance Company presents Rise Above 4 pm June 4 at Willamette High School. Eugene Ballet Academy presents An Enchanted Garden 5 pm June 4 at the Hult Center. The University of Oregon

Dance Department presents its Spring Loft 8 pm June 9 in the Dougherty Dance Theater. Zapp Academy of Dance presents Road Trip 3 pm June 11 at the Hult. The Academy of Ballet Fantastique offers ARTISTIQUE: Pictures at an Exhibition 7 pm June 10 and 2 pm June 11 at the Wildish Community Theater in Springfield. And Eugene's hula school, Na Pua O Hawai'i Nei, presents its fifth annual hula exhibition For Our King and Queen 2 pm June 24 at Cascade Middle School.

In memoriam:

Eugene Ballet Company recently lost one of its own, company dancer Jesse Griffin, who died May 13 in Klamath Falls. He began his dance training in K Falls at 15, telling Rachel's School of Dance owner, Rachel Glenn, "I want to be your first professional dancer, and I want to dance with the Eugene Ballet Company." After serving as an aspirant, he became an EBC company member for the 2016-17 season. A gofundme campaign has been established in his name. A memorial for Griffin will be held June 9 in Klamath Falls.

PLAYING IN THE DARK

Eugene group seeks to resurrect a dark art

For photographers who came of age during the film era, the experience of seeing that very first image materialize in the developing tray is remembered as magical or uncanny. That the miracle often occurred in an educational setting as a shared communal experience deepened the impact.

Yes, community darkrooms left a fond residue in the mind as well as on the fingertips. But alas, their influence has faded. With photography's transition from film to digital now mostly complete, community darkrooms have largely disappeared from the national landscape, Eugene included.

And with that shift, an opportunity for shared experience has given way to privatized practice.

Enter Eugene Darkroom Group, a consortium of film shooters dedicated to building a community darkroom here in town. EDG imagines the space as a center for printing, classes, and creative collaboration around film-based processes.

After slowly taking form over a few years, the group's pace has accelerated, and they are now applying for non-profit status.

Where will the darkroom be and who will use it? Both questions remain unsettled.

Former darkrooms at Dot Dotson's and Maude Kerns Art Center have been floated as tentative sites. Group leaders have identified a local community of 30 to 35 amateur film shooters who would serve as the membership base.

Final decisions remain to be made. At this point EDG is focused on raising the legal fees to incorporate as a nonprofit. Their first fundraiser is 7 to 10 pm Saturday, June 3, at Sam Bond's Foundry, 540 E. Eighth Avenue, where local film photography will be exhibited and offered for sale.

EDG can also be contacted at eugenedarkroom@gmail.com and on Facebook at @eugdark.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Life is in the mood to communicate with you rather lyrically. Here are just a few of the signs and portents you may encounter, along with theories about their meaning. If you overhear a lullaby, it's time to seek the influence of a tender, nurturing source. If you see a type of fruit or flower you don't recognize, it means you have a buried potential you don't know much about and you're ready to explore it further. If you spy a playing card in an unexpected place, trust serendipity to bring you what you need. If a loud noise arrives near a moment of decision: Traditionally it signifies caution, but these days it suggests you should be bold.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your body is holy and magic and precious. I advise you not to sell it or rent it or compromise it in any way — especially now, when you have an opening to upgrade your relationship with it. Yes, Taurus, it's time to attend to your sweet flesh and blood with consummate care. Find out exactly what your amazing organism needs to feel its best. Lavish it with pleasure and healing. Treat it as you would a beloved child or animal. I also hope you will have intimate conversations with the cells that compose your body. Let them know you love and appreciate them. Tell them you're ready to collaborate on a higher level.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "The most intense moments the universe has ever known are the next 15 seconds," said philosopher Terence McKenna. He was naming a central principle of reality: that every new NOW is a harvest of everything that has ever happened; every fresh moment is a blast of novelty that arises in response to the sum total of all history's adventures. This is always true, of course. But I suspect the phenomenon will be especially pronounced for you in the near future. More than usual, you may find that every day is packed with interesting feelings and poignant fun and epic realizations. This could be pleasurable, but also overwhelming. Luckily, you have the personal power necessary to make good use of the intensity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Nobody likes to be scrutinized or critiqued or judged. But we Crabs (yes, I'm one of you) are probably touchier about that treatment than any other sign of the zodiac. (Hypersensitivity is a trait that many astrologers ascribe to Cancerians.) However, many of us do allow one particular faultfinder to deride us: the nagging voice in the back of our heads. Sometimes we even give free rein to its barbs. But I would like to propose a transformation of this situation. Maybe we could scold ourselves less and be a bit more open to constructive feedback coming from other people. Starting now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The lion's potency, boldness and majesty are qualities you have a mandate to cultivate in the next three weeks. To get in the righteous mood, I suggest you gaze upon images and videos of lions. Come up with your own version of a lion's roar — I mean actually make that sound — and unleash it regularly. You might also want to try the yoga posture known as the lion pose. If you're unfamiliar with it, go here for tips: tinyurl.com/lionpose. What else might help you invoke and express the unfettered leonine spirit?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): "What does it matter how many lovers you have if none of them gives you the universe?" French psychoanalyst Jacques Lacan posed that question. I invite you to put it at the top of your list of hot topics to meditate on. In doing so, I trust you won't use it as an excuse to disparage your companions for their inadequacies. Rather, I hope it will mobilize you to supercharge your intimate alliances; to deepen your awareness of the synergistic beauty you could create together; to heighten your ability to be given the universe by those whose fates are interwoven with yours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): From my study of the lost prophecies of Nostradamus, the hidden chambers beneath the Great Pyramid of Cheops and the current astrological omens, I have determined that now is a favorable time for you to sing liberation songs with cheeky authority . . . to kiss the sky and dance with the wind on a beach or hilltop . . . to gather your most imaginative allies and brainstorm about what you really want to do in the next five years. Do you dare to slip away from business-as-usual so you can play in the enchanted land of what-if? If you're smart, you will escape the grind and grime of the daily rhythm so you can expand your mind to the next largest size.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "On some hill of despair," wrote poet Galway Kinnell, "the bonfire you kindle can light the great sky — though it's true, of course, to make it burn you have to throw yourself in." You may not exactly feel despair, Scorpio. But I suspect you are in the throes of an acute questioning that makes you feel close to the edge of forever. Please consider the possibility that it's a favorable time to find out just how much light and heat are hidden inside you. Your ache for primal fun and your longing to accelerate your soul's education are converging with your quest to summon a deeper, wilder brilliance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're in a phase when you have the power to find answers to questions that have stumped you for a while. Why? Because you're more open-minded and curious than usual. You're also ready to be brazenly honest with yourself. Congrats! In light of the fact that you'll be lucky at solving riddles, I've got three good ones for you to wrestle with. 1. Which of your anxieties may actually be cover-ups for a lazy refusal to change a bad habit? 2. What resource will you use more efficiently when you stop trying to make it do things it's not designed to do? 3. What blessing will you receive as soon as you give a clear signal that you are ready for it?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A typical Capricorn cultivates fervent passions, even to the point of obsession. Almost no one knows their magnitude, though, because the members of your tribe often pursue their fulfillment with methodical, business-like focus. But I wonder if maybe it's a good time to reveal more of the raw force of this driving energy than you usually do. It might humanize you in the eyes of potential helpers who see you as too strong to need help. And it could motivate your allies to provide the extra support and understanding you'll need in the coming weeks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In accordance with the astrological omens, I invite you to carry out a flashy flirtation with the color red. I dare you to wear red clothes and red jewelry. Buy yourself red roses. Sip red wine and savor strawberries under red lights. Sing Elvis Costello's "The Angels Want to Wear My Red Shoes" and Prince's "Little Red Corvette." Tell everyone why 2017 is a red-letter year for you. For extra credit, murmur the following motto whenever a splash of red teases and pleases your imagination: "My red-hot passion is my version of high fashion."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): "If you want a puppy, start by asking for a pony," read the bumper sticker on the Lexus SUV I saw. That confused me. Would the owner of a Lexus SUV be the type of person who didn't expect to get what she really wanted? In any case, Pisces, I'm conveying a version of this bumper-sticker wisdom to you. If you want your domestic scene to thrive even more than it already does, ask for a feng shui master to redesign your environment so it has a perfect flow of energy. If you want a community that activates the best in you, ask for a utopian village full of emotionally intelligent activists. If you want to be animated by a focused goal that motivates you to wake up excited each morning, ask for a glorious assignment that will help save the world.

HOMEWORK: Your imagination is the single most important asset you possess. Listen to the podcast: bit.ly/YourProphecy.

SAVAGE LOVE
LOOKING
 BY DAN SAVAGE
I'm a middle-aged homo trying to figure out Grindr. Is it impolite to go on Grindr if you're not looking for an immediate hookup? My preferred form of sexual relationship is the friend-with-benefits situation. I go on Grindr looking to make friends who could, at least potentially, be sex partners, but I like to do the friend thing before the sex. I've had guys call me an asshole because I exchanged messages with them for 20 minutes and then didn't come right over and fuck them. Do they have a point? Does logging into a hookup app like Grindr imply openness to an immediate sexual encounter?
Talking Online Repulses Some Others

Always be up front about your intentions, TORSO. The best way to do that is by creating a profile—on Grindr or elsewhere—that clearly describes what you want and what you're up for. Because good partners (sexual or otherwise) communicate their wants clearly. Adding something like this to your profile should do it: "My preferred form of sexual relationship is the friend-with-benefits situation. I go on Grindr looking to make friends who could, at least potentially, be sex partners, but I like to do the friend thing before the sex."

Grindr is an app designed and marketed to facilitate hookups, but some people have found friends, lovers, and husbands on the app (usually after hooking up first). So being on a hookup app doesn't automatically mean you're looking for "right now," and it certainly doesn't obligate you to fuck every guy you swap messages with. But if you're not clear in your profile or very first message about what you're doing there, TORSO, guys looking for a hookup on that hookup app will be rightly annoyed with you. (The time and energy he sunk into you could have been sunk into someone looking for right now.) If you are clear, guys seeking instacock have only themselves to blame for wasting their time on you.

Your timing could also have something to do with guys calling you an asshole. Are you exchanging messages at two in the morning for 20 minutes? Because most guys on Grindr at that hour are seeking immediate sexual encounters. If you're just chatting in the middle of the night, then you're probably wasting someone's time—if, again, you're not being absolutely clear about what you're doing there. Also, TORSO, Grindr is location-based, which means you're going to get a different experience based on where you're using it. Some neighborhoods seem to be filled with messy guys looking for chemsex, bless their hearts. In others, you'll find unwoke twinks who are on Grindr to swap (highly problematic) GIFs of black women pulling faces. And if you're in a rural area, it's likely you'll message your full cast of Grindr torsos within a few days.

Think of Grindr as a giant gay bar—most guys are there to hook up, a few just want to hang out and chat, some dudes are really messed up (avoid them), and no one is at their best around closing time.

I'm a 25-year-old gay woman and I've been looking for a girlfriend for the past two years. I post on dating websites, go to the lesbian club, take part in the LGBTQ+ scene at my university, and put myself in places where I might meet women. But I'm worried that my persona deters women: I'm extremely analytic, a doctoral student and university instructor. Whenever I meet a girl, our conversation always goes in the same direction: She thinks it's cool I work with literature and then brings up her favorite pop-culture novel like Harry Potter. I say something like "I've never read Harry Potter, but people rave about it. What do you like about it? I took an online Harry Potter test once for a friend, and it said I was a Slytherin." At this point, things change. The girl I'm speaking with gets flustered. She says something like "Oh, I'm not good at describing things," seemingly feeling pressured to give me an intellectual response, like I'm giving her a quiz. I'm not sure what to do about this. I am having trouble maintaining casual and fun conversations despite my intentions. I come off as intense. I think I'm a pretty attractive person, but my dating life is starting to make me feel differently. I work out regularly and take good care of myself. How can I find a woman I jibe with?
A Lesbian Obviously Needs Excitement

You're doing all the right things—almost. You're getting out there, you're not shy about initiating conversation, and you're moving on multiple fronts—online, club nights, LGBTQ+SLFNBBQGLA+++ groups. Join a women's athletic organization—join a softball league—and you'll be moving on every lesbo front. That said, ALONE, I'm surprised this hasn't popped into your extremely analytic head: If Y happens whenever I do X, and Y isn't the desired outcome, then maybe I should knock this Y shit the fuck off. Your response to the mention of Harry Potter drips with what I trust is unintentional condescension. ("I've never read it... what do you like about it... I took an online test once for a friend...") Don't want women to think you're administering a quiz? Don't want women to get the impression you're too intellectual for them? Don't want to seem like someone incapable of keeping things casual and fun? Don't administer quizzes, don't subtly telegraph your disgust, and keep things casual by offering a little info about yourself instead of probing. ("I haven't read the Harry Potter books, but I'm a huge Emma Watson fangirl. Who isn't, right?") And maybe go ahead and read Harry Potter already.

I'm a married woman whose hot, hung husband is into "beautiful women and pretty boys" (his words—and he means boyish men of legal age, of course). It took a dozen years to get that out of him. I'd watched him drool over pretty male baristas and waiters, but it wasn't until I found twink porn on his computer that he came out about his "narrow slice of bisexuality." (Again, his words.) Now that it's out—now that he's out—he's anxious to have a three-way with me and a femme guy. I'm up for it, but the pretty boys we're finding online who are into my husband aren't into me. My husband says he would feel too guilty doing it without me, which means he may not be able to do it at all. I want him to do it. It turns me on to think about. I don't have to be there.
Hubby's Underlying Bi Biological Yearnings

Let your hot, hung husband find a pretty boy he likes, HUBBY, then ask for the boy's e-mail or phone number or IG handle or whatever, and have a quick back-channel convo with him. Let him know your hot, hung husband (HHH) wants his ass and that you'll be there—but only at the start. Once drinks have been served, the ice has been broken, and a little spit has been swapped (between him and HHH), tell him you'll invent a reason to excuse yourself (your period, bad clams, whatever), leaving him alone with your HHH. At that point, HHH can decide for himself if he wishes to proceed without you but with your blessing (which you can toss over your shoulder on your way out of the room). Good luck!
